

Modern Japanese

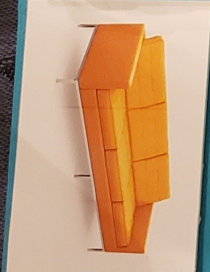

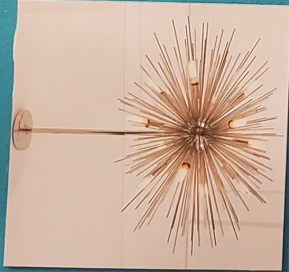

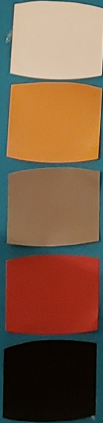

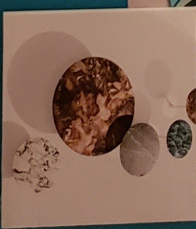

Japanese style incorporates elements of nature and minimalism throughout its design. The furniture is often low to the floor/earth with simple clean lines. Traditional mats are commonly used instead of dining chairs. The flooring is made from wood, bamboo, water elements are also key to bringing the style which may include foundations or soaking tubs. In keeping with minimalism, Japanese interiors maintain an open space with soft natural light and natural colors or colors found in nature.

Stick Nature

Mid-Century Modern

Mid-Century Modern has become a popular style choice for its versatility. The focus of the style surrounds functionality and minimalism combined with playful colors and shapes. The structure of the interior often includes wood, steel, and large glass windows. The furniture is often made with plastic, acrylic, and vinyl materials and has clean, curved and straight lines. Some of the minimalist elements include exposed beams, natural light, and open floor plans.

Playful Minimalism